Problems with a Heart-Shaped Curve

Leszek JANKOWSKI, Adam MARLEWSKI

Poznań University of Technology, Institute of Mathematics ul. Piotrowo 3a, 60-985 Poznań, Poland
e-mail: amarlew@math.put.poznan.pl

Abstract. We examine the work of two computer algebra systems on an ordinary differential equation of the first order. Both systems, DERIVE 5 and Maple 8, yield implicit solutions, and both have problems plotting graphs of integral curves (which may be classified as heart-shaped). These problems are even more serious when, in Maple, we deal with the implicit solution, where the Lambert function is involved.